Tormund's Bizarre Bazaar

Running the shelves

Tormund sells the thing nobody else wanted, until somebody desperately wants it. A jar watches the till. A folded cloak strains towards a wind that is not there. The price tag on a rather ordinary bottle is larger than the bottle.

Keep practical capture supplies available while he can obtain them. Give each special object a single stock box and cross it off when sold. Earlier stock can remain on a later visit; a new Pass opens new contacts and discoveries without refilling every shelf. Tormund can also show an expensive piece the party cannot yet afford.

Restock when an actual caravan arrives, a hunting party returns or a customer sells something suitable. During the blockade, sales empty the shop and new supplies become jobs. Record the date and source of a replenishment. Do not replenish a unique object simply because a character leaves and re-enters the shop.

Use the prices below as Tormund’s opening asks. Availability, the condition of a piece and what the party has done for him can matter as much as coin.

Practical counter

Supply or service	Price	GM use
Net	1 gp	Use the campaign's equipment rules.
Medium cage	10 gp	An actual cage, not automatic capture or transport.
Sedative dose	10 gp	Agree the creature, delivery and applicable rules before purchase; it is not an automatic unconsciousness button.
Appraisal	5 gp	Identify the trophy or curio and give its market estimate. Hidden magic or a curse follows the normal identification procedure.
Ordinary beast training	10 gp/week	Uses time and the creature's behaviour; this is distinct from a Genesis bond.

Copper shelf

Object	Price	What it does
Old pocket watch	10 gp	Keeps ordinary time until midnight, when its hands run backwards for a minute. The minute is not lost.
Antique spectacles	15 gp	Fine brass frames with mismatched lenses. Ordinary spectacles; no numerical bonus.
Fortune-telling cards	15 gp	The knave wears a different hat each morning. Their readings are performance, not reliable divination.
Vial of glowing liquid	20 gp	A sealed display curio giving faint light. It is not a potion or crafting ingredient with an unstated benefit.
Magic kaleidoscope	20 gp	Shows slow-moving coloured landscapes of its own making. It does not observe real distant places.
Climbing gear	25 gp	The existing equipment kit, battered but serviceable.

Silver cabinet

Object	Price	What it does
Jar of preserved eyeballs	50 gp	The eyes turn towards the sound of coins. They cannot see, record or scout for their owner.
Vintage porcelain doll	75 gp	Occasionally asks whether winter is over. It has no independent turn, movement or usable knowledge.
Oddly shaped glass bottle	100 gp	Its handle is on the inside. It holds an ordinary bottle's contents; its strange construction is the attraction.
Showman's cloak	150 gp	Its hem billows dramatically in still air. The motion produces no useful force or movement.
Deck of illusions	300 gp	Use the core magic item's rules, charges and limitations. One physical deck is in stock.
Immovable rod	500 gp	Use the core magic item's rules and force limit. One rod is in stock.

Gold collection

Object	Price	What it does
Taxidermy fox with two tails	250 gp	An exceptionally convincing specimen. Tormund insists it had both tails when he acquired it. A collector's object.
Unusual music box	300 gp	Plays a familiar nursery tune with one stubbornly wrong note. Its music has no charm or sleep effect.
Mist-filled crystal orb	350 gp	Coloured mist forms fleeting imaginary landscapes. It supplies no factual visions or scrying.
Ring of mind shielding	2,500 gp	Use the core magic item's rules, including attunement and any soul already held within it. The GM records its actual state before offering it.
Portable hole	4,000 gp	Use the core magic item's rules, capacity and interactions with other extradimensional storage.

Platinum pieces

Object	Price	GM use
Mummified sorcerer's hand	1,000 gp	A preserved collector's specimen. A drop of lamp oil makes a fingertip glow like a candle for ten minutes, once per day. It grants no other spells or powers.
Enchanted hourglass	1,500 gp	Measures one ordinary hour with sand flowing upwards. It resets when inverted. It does not alter time, actions or rests.
Cursed monkey's paw	2,000 gp	A named collector's piece with the harmless but unmistakable curse below. It grants no wishes.

The paw's curse. The first creature to purchase it willingly becomes its owner. Each dawn while it remains their possession, their voice acquires a faint chattering undertone until the next dawn. Communication and spell components function normally; there is no imposed action, disadvantage or numerical penalty. Selling or freely giving it to a willing new owner transfers the curse at the following dawn. Remove curse ends the current bond. Tormund demonstrates the effect before accepting payment. A more powerful wish-bearing paw would be a separate adventure item with its own written rules and price.

What he buys

Purchase	Payment
Good monster trophy	10 gp x creature CR
Trophy with a current named buyer	Twice the fallback trophy price
Live capture accepted for his pens	25 gp x creature CR
Troll blood	50 gp/vial
Owlbear feathers	25 gp/ten
Giant spider venom	100 gp/vial
Yeti fur	200 gp/pelt
Minotaur horn	500 gp
Chimera hide	1,000 gp

Use the particular named commission's payment when one exists. Pay for the same specimen once: a live-capture payment is not also a second corpse-and-parts payout. The listed fallback formulas do not create guaranteed buyers or unlimited funds. Tormund examines quality and can decline a damaged, illegal-in-town or unsuitable purchase in character. He states any reduced offer before taking the goods.

With Arcane Forge, use that companion's material prices and harvested quantities instead of this fallback parts list. Ordinary captured animals do not become Genesis creatures. The existing hidden box of eggs remains a story discovery; it is not a restocking source of unlimited eggs.

Requests that become jobs

Choose a buyer with a specific use, a part or live creature, an established destination and a price within the existing campaign economy. State the payment and what condition the specimen must arrive in before the party accepts. Mark the commission complete once delivered. Unexpected supplies can change the shop: a returned cage, a rival buyer, a crate diverted by the blockade or a trophy Tormund recognises can start the next conversation.